Customer Reviews

Outstanding biography of an amazing man. He was indeed a returned exile. He went back to the home of his forefathers and made impactful contributions. The authors kept the reader captive and wanting to learn more about George Christian, his family and contemporaries. This is definitely a must read for students of the African studies and the African diaspora.

The book was well written and very thorough. I liked how it traced his life and career through three continents: The Americas, Europe and Africa and how he overcame sickness, prejudice and xenophobia to launch a successful career. Very inspiring to say the least! Loved it

Interesting history of West Indians and their contributions to Ghana's development pre-independence

Margaret Rouse-Jones of Trinidad and Tobago and Estelle Appiah of Ghana have accomplished a first by rendering this biography of a Dominica born scholar who makes a monumental contribution to law, education and public service in Africa/Ghana -after having been a participant in the first Pan African Conference in 1900 London. No other authors have written with such intimate detail of a Caribbean born leader whose focus on family unity, a commitment to academic excellence and industry is still paying dividends almost 80 years after his death. By championing economic opportunity for Gold Coast cocoa farmers, advocating for higher education for Africans while in the Gold Coast legislative council, or buying property to boost agriculture on his home island of Dominica, George Christian's life story is a beacon by which modern African and Caribbean leaders can take beneficial bearing. Christian refused to take personal comfort in his family's achievements and sought to share his knowledge and networks with all those within reach. Truly, this was a man in the mold of Booker T Washington and those other nation builders of integrity who refused to be shackled by the bonds of history. He persevered and won a noble victory which redounded to the benefit of all humanity. Well done!
