Kathy Elgin studied English at London University, specializing in drama and 19th-century literature. After a full-time publishing career as writer and editor, she worked for several years as a dance and theater critic before joining the Royal Shakespeare Company in 1987. Now focused on writing, she has written many books, including titles in the Chelsea House sets Fashions of a Decade, Costume and Fashion Source Books, and Costume Around the World.

This series a must-have for costumers, digital or fabric. My favorite of the series - clear and succinct, with just the right images.

I used this book as my main source for a college term paper about Elizabethan fashion and costuming for Shakespeare. The pictures were numerous and detailed. The text was well written and FULL of valuable information without being convoluted. She covers everything from ruffs to armor to color choices and connotations. Overall, it was a great resource and very entertaining.

Not quite what I expected but an ex-lib so no great expense expended.
