Homelands And Empires: Indigenous Spaces, Imperial Fictions, And Competition For Territory In Northeastern North America, 1690-1763 (Studies In Atlantic Canada History)

Synopsis

The period from 1690 to 1763 was a time of intense territorial competition during which Indigenous peoples remained a dominant force. British Nova Scotia and French Acadia were imaginary places that administrators hoped to graft over the ancestral homelands of the Miâ™kmaq, Wulstukwiuk, Passamaquoddy, and Abenaki peoples. Homelands and Empires is the inaugural volume in the University of Toronto Pressâ™s Studies in Atlantic Canada History. In this deeply researched and engagingly argued work, Jeffers Lennox reconfigures our general understanding of how Indigenous peoples, imperial forces, and settlers competed for space in northeastern North America before the British conquest in 1763. Lennoxâ™s judicious investigation of official correspondence, treaties, newspapers and magazines, diaries, and maps reveals a locally developed system of accommodation that promoted peaceful interactions but enabled violent reprisals when agreements were broken. This outstanding contribution to scholarship on early North America questions the nature and practice of imperial expansion in the face of Indigenous territorial strength.

"Homelands and Empires is an excellent study of the struggle among Indigenous nations, the French, and the British for territorial sovereignty in Northeastern North America, what is now Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, PEI, and parts of Maine and Quebec. It is the best study available to lay out the complex negotiations over the region and how importantly they figured in diplomatic negotiations in the eighteenth century." (Elizabeth Mancke, Department of History, University of New Brunswick)" Jeffers Lennoxâ™s deep research, coupled with his good work in applying fresh insights about spatiality and cartographic knowledge make for a book that stands on its own as a signal contribution to our understanding of the northeastern regions of North America." (Chris Hodson, Department of History, BYU)

Jeffers Lennox is an assistant professor in the Department of History at Wesleyan University.

I really enjoyed reading this well researched well written history of Nova Scotia and Acadia. The author follows the British, The French and Indigenous peoples as they settle and war over Northeastern North America. I liked the way the author showed how maps and geography shaped the boundaries and public perception of the new empires. The text is accompanied by illustrations of these early maps. Enjoy this fascinating history
