Saburouta is a Japanese artist best known as the author and artist of Citrus.

It's been nearly a year since the last volume of Citrus but I am happy to report that the wait was worth it. This is a volume that has two great stories. The first involves Yuzu and Mei going out on a date. Yuzu has put together a guide for building a relationship with Mei but when Mei finds her notebook, she decides that the two of them will go out using Yuzu's "perfect date" template. It makes for a hilarious story and a date template is just something a teenager would try. While the first story is very funny, the second one is heartbreaking. Yuzu wants to buy Mei a gift and has taken a part-time job. She's working herself to exhaustion and to compound matters, there is a big exam coming up. Matsuri is back, acting as a one woman Greek chorus warning Yuzu her intensity might get her hurt. Yuzu is also confronted by homophobic feelings among some old friends. That and school pressures lead to a breakdown and the usually reserved Mei shows great wisdom explaining to Yuzu how they will face up to the problems their relationship will bring. It's a wonderful scene and Volume 6 is probably the finest in the series to date.

After the election, Yuzu wants to move forward with her relationship with Mei so she writes out a plan. But when Mei discovers it, can the two of them bring it to fruition? Then Yuzu wants to get a present for Mei, so she sneaks around at a part time job. But will past friends and a rival for her affection bring things crashing around her? This volume seems to be a turning point for the girls, not just in their love but as people. Yuzu is still trying hard to figure out her heart and Mei is doing the same, but not showing it. This has been a great series, shame we have to wait so long for the next one.
